TO-DAY'S BELMONT PARK CARD. National Stallion, Ladies and International Steeplechase Features.

The Westchester Racing Association offers an especially attractive program to be run of at Belmont Park this afternoon. The five furlongs, is one of the features, with such starters as the unbeaten First Water, John L. Madden's Timber, Comedienne and Merry

E. Madden's Timber, Comedienne and Merry Boy, F. R. Hitchcock's Vendor, Frank Farreli's Clark Griffth and others.

The Ladies Stakes for three-year-old fillies, at a mile, will probably bring together Tradition, Zeala, Coy Maid, Gold Ten, Flinders and others. The International Steeple-chase, at about two miles, has drawn a good field, including Flying Buttress, Flying Virginian, Arian and others. Migraine has top weight in the handicap at a mile with Jonquil and Rostand to beat. In the first race, for platers, seven furlongs, The Gadfiy, Little Woods and Jetsam look good, while in the second, for two-year-olds, four and a half furlongs, Just, Evelyn J., Hooray and Mintia loay be the factors. GOSSIP OF THE RACETRACK. Stewards Fine Trainer Watkins for Threat

It looked for a moment as if there would serious trouble over the bidding up of M. I Hayman's De Reszkeafter he had won the fifth race at Belmont Park yesterday. De Meszke was entered to be sold for $1,400 and kunsas Price, who ran second with Arabo, slipped up to the rail around the judge's land ready to bid on the Lamplighter horse. He had run the figures up to $1,800, when Hayman's trainer, R. E. Watkins, who was protecting the horse, suddenly lost his temper and yelled at Price.

The promptly boosted the figures to $2,000 as a sort of defy, whereupon Hayman jumped the figures to $2,000 and kept his horse. Watkins's remark was soon carried to the stewards, who called the trainer before them and notified him that he had been fined $200 for "intimidation," Watkins was also warned not Clients.

Those who backed Jack McGuinnis's Buttling in the fourth race were partially sunned when they saw the Star Ruby colt clinging to the outer rail all the way along the back stretch, around the far turn and down the homestretch where he was anchored in the soft going. After the race the stewards questioned W. Knapp, the jockey, who said that the colt bolted with him and that he could not get him under control. Buttling was backed down to 3 to 1, the Brooklyn politicians, as usual, being down to a man.

GOLFING ON THREE LINKS. Schoolboys, College Teams and Women in Competitions.

Travers, the title holder, won his match from Mackellar handily, after going out in 42, yesterday morning in the Interscholastic Golf Association championship on the Garden City links, but in the afternoon he lost to Johnson, a newcomer from Ridgewood School, New Jersey. A streak of bad luck just when Travers seemed to be waking up was probably what beat the champion. Partridge played the best golf of the day. He did an 80 in the morning, and needed it to beat Dunning by 1 up, while in the afternoon Partridge made an 85 and put out the Boston boy Evans, who took 90. The summary:

Championship. Second Round—Jerome D. Travers, Collisons, beat Donald Mackellar, Pratt's, by 7 up and 3 to play; L. Johnson, Ridgewood, beat G. An innovation in this season's program of the Women's Metropolitan Golf Association, a series of one day tournaments on different links, was introduced yesterday at the Richmond County Country Club with much success. There was no gross score prize in the morning handicap, but Mrs. Stout would have won if there had been, while she won the approaching and putting match after a tie at nine with Mrs. Brophy. Mrs. Stout, who twice won both the national and Metropolitan championships before her marriage in 1903, will play in the events of the Women's M. G. A., including the championship at Baltusrol next month.

Mrs. Conners of Apawamis won first prize in the handicap, and Mrs. Tiffany, a former Apawamis player, but now entered from the Nassau County Club, won the second prize. The handicapping was splendid and made a finish divided by single strokes between the first six. The summary:

ENDYMION IN THE LEAD. George Lauder's Schooner Well to Wind-

ward of Hamburg and Atlantic. George Lauder, Jr.'s, schooner yacht Endymion was the first of the racers to pass the Nantucket Shoals lightship. It is probable, too, that the Fleur de Lys, Thistle and Utowana were close after the Endymion. At the time these vessels went by they must bave been many miles to windward of the Hamburg, Atlantic and Hildegarde, which, according to E. C. Benedict's report, brought in on his steam yacht Oneida, had held on to the port tack on which they crossed the line. heading to the southeast by south. The wind at the start was from the east, and when the vachts were lost in the fog the Atlantic was leading with the Ailsa slightly to windward and the Hamburg near by. The Hilde-

Capt. Loesch on the Endymion as soon as the fog screened his movements from the leaders tacked his yacht and stood about northeast toward the eastern end of Long Island. He was followed soon afterward by the Fleur de Lys, Thistle and Utowana.

It was the intention of the masters of these yachts to take a northern passage, skinning close by the Nantucket Shoals lightship and then on close under Cape Race and by the great circle, the shortest route across the Atlantic. They realized that there was a chance of meeting ice, but the advantages of this route over the more southern one were so many that Capts. Loesch and Bohlin and Commodore Robert E. Tod were willing were so many that Capts. Loesch and Bohlin and Commodore Robert E. Tod were willing to take chances.

Commodore Benedict on the Oneida followed the Hamburg and Atlantic for about 130 miles. He says that the wind fresheaned and that at 4:50 o'clock in the afternoon the Hamburg's jib topsail was split and taken in and that the Atlantic's mizzen staysail was taken in. The sea was heavy and the Hamburg was gaining. By 5:30 the Hamburg was well to windward of the Atlantic. The Hidegarde was two miles astern and the Ailsa far behind.

The fog shut down thick and the wind got lighter. Then the wind shifted to the north. Coming back, the Oneida passed the Ailsa, which had met with some accident, but she was then going ahead. This was at 10 o'clock on Thursday morning and the Ailsa was 120 miles southeast by east, one-quarter east, from Sandy Hook lightship.

At 9 o'clock on Thursday morning the wind went to the northwest and since then it has been freshening. Coming back, the Oneida passed none of the other racers, which shows that all had steed to the northeast. She was the fastest of those boats under the conditions that prevailed and she was the first to get the shifts in the wind that enabled her to start sheets, and the judgment shown by Capt. Loesch has without doubt put the Endymion far to windward of the Hamburg and Atlantic and given him a good lead in the race.

According to reports from the ocean yesterday the wind was fresh, about 20 miles an hour, from the northwest. This is a wind that the racers want for a good passage and it is a wind that will favor the Valhalla, Apache and Sunbeam.

The steamship Grosser Kurfuerst reported and season.

wind that will favor the Valhalla, Apache and Sunbeam.

The steamship Grosser Kurfuerst reported passing the Apache just south of the Nantucket Shoals lightship at 10 o'clock on Thursday night and the Valhalia was sighted from the lightship at midnight.

Capt. Samuels, who sailed the clipper ship Dreadnaught and afterward the Henrietta in the race of 1886, thinks that the captain who sticks to the northern passage will do much better than those who go south. He argues that the course is shorter and the winds fresher.

RACETRACKS DECLARE WAR.

WILL ACCEPT NO MORE FEES FROM BOOKMAKERS.

Open Ring, With John Cavanagh the Master -Rumor That Admission Rates Will Be Increased to All Tracks-New Order in Effect at Belmont Park To-day. There will be a new order of things in the betting ring at Belmont Park to-day, according to a mandate issued by the race track managers yesterday which acted as a bomb in the camp of the Metropolitan Turf Association, the name of the organization of book-makers who have enjoyed a monopoly in in the way of privileges for the last ten years. When the Mets took their places in the "front line" before the first race, they paid over $57 each for the usual number of badges and the right to occupy the vantage points held by them so long in the ring. But before the second race was run this money was returned to the bookmakers, with the notification that in future the tracks would not accept further fees of this kind from any of the layers, whether members of the Mets or not. No fees were accepted at all from the back line men or from the books in the field. Furthermore, the books, in response to queries, were semi-officially informed that they could purchase badges entitling them to ad mission to the track at the gates to-day, but beyond that the layers were left to wonder what would be their lot when they attempted what would be their lot when they attempted to resume business.

From good authority The Son learned last night that the ring to-day will be thrown open to all bookmakers who can give a satisfactory guarantee of their financial responsibility to John G. Cavanagh, who will be be be been continued to the situation in future in the ring, not only at belimont Park, but all at the other tracks racing under the purisdiction of the Jockey Club. It will be up to Cavanagh, it is reported, to say just what men shall operate books and what privileges they can early. He will give no more lavors to members of the Mets than to others, and it is understood that there will be eighty or more books in what is known at the "front" line, the places to be filled, both with hiets and men who have had applications for places filed with Cavanagh, to the number of more than a hundred, for two weeks past.

This action on the part of the track managers was bound to come. It would have been resorted to some time ago but for a request for time made by Edward Burke, the well known bookmaker, representing a majority of the Mots, who did not concur with the views for time made by Edward Burke, the well known bookmaker, representing a majority of the Mets, who did not concur with the views set forth by the leaders, Wheelock, Jones & Co. The racetracks insisted, without the slightest indication of wavering, that there should be eighty books in the front line each day. In order to make up the deficioncy, five non-members were placed in this line two weeks ago and have remained there ever since. During the temporary In this line two weeks ago and have remained there ever since. During the temporary truce declared at the request of Burke and his friends, the number of Mets booking fell off each day until yesterday there were only sixty-one on hand to do business. Burke sixty-one on hand to do business. Burke protested to the track owners that this was the best showing that the Mets, with 200 members, could make, and then came the crash which wipes the Mets off the racing man.

members, could make, and then came the crash which wipes the Mets off the racing map.

In conjunction with this sudden shift in the situation, rumors were current that the track managers had decided to increase the general; ate of admission to the track, also that the betting rings would be enclosed in future, and that persons wishing to make wagers would be asked to pay an extra fee to go inside to battle with the books. One of the leading Mets stated that he believed the track managers, in order to replace the fees refused from the books, would increase the admission tee to Seach day, which would entitle purchasers to the right to bet. But when S. S. Howland, one of the stewards of the Belmont Fark meeting, was asked about the proposed raise in tariff, he said that he knew absolutely nothing about it.

In declining to take any fees further from the books, the tracks will lose a daily revenue of nearly, $10,000. Vet it is said that this policy was resorted to because of the fact that the track owners wish to sever all connection, even of an indirect nature, with the bookmakers, who in some instances have threatened court proceedings, with the idea of breaking up racing or bringing the track owners to terms. In all the legal procedure made by the poolroom men, headed by Peter De Lacy, repeated attempts have been made to prove that the tracks derive a direct revenue from the betting rings, and the fact that De Lacy has already threatened to make a wholesale raid on the ring at Gravesend next week is thought to have carried some weight.

a wholesale raid on the ring at Gravesend next week is thought to have carried some weight.

The members of the Mets were up in arms as soon as they realized the situation. Some of them made the statement that their organization, as a whole, had subscribed to $50,000 worth of stock in the Belmont Park track, and that George Wheelock and L. O. Appleby had subscribed $32,000 and $21,000, respectively, in addition. For that reason, they declared that the owners of the tracks were not acting fairly and that serious trouble would result.

"The complimentary badges issued to the Mets for the season, said one of the leading bookmakers," will be taken up to-morrow, and all of us will have to pay admission. We will be on hand ready to make book without paying the usual fees. But you can bet that the track owners will make up a loss of $10,000 a day, which they have been taking from the books, by raising the price of admission. They do not intend to lose this money, because, if they depended upon the regular admission rates, which amount to about $15,000 daily, they would not be able to pay off big stakes without suffering a loss or going without a cent in profit. A raise in the tariff will not be welcomed by the public, and that will mean poor business all around. We think that we have been shabblly treated, and that a reaction will set in as soon as the public gets on to the facts."

During the past week there has been a marked falling off in the general business in the ring. Several of the best known layers have quit heavy losers. After the usual fidding, Gotch brought Jenkins down with a log hold. During the next twenty minutes Gotch was the aggressor. He had several good holds on Jenkins, but Tom broke them. Gotch put Jenkins's two shoulders to the mat a minute after the first hour, but as it was not a pin fall it did not count. Jenkins persisted in edging to the end of the mat and holding on to the ropes.

in edging to the end of the mat and holding on to the ropes.

This angered Gotch and he stopped wrestling for several minutes, and only continued when he was assured by Hurst that Jenkins would play fair. The Garden was in an uproar and the excitement did not subside until the match was resumed.

Gotch was growing very tired and delayed the match by making protests of fouls. Finally, after 1 hour 27 minutes and 57 seconds, Gotch deliberately fell into a weak hold and with a gentle push went meekly on his back. It appeared that Gotch quit cold. Four policemen escorted Gotch to and from Four policemen escorted Gotch to and from his dressing room. It was said that this was done to protect the Iowan from the ire of Jenkins's friends, who said that Gotch had bitten him twice on the arm during the bout. The second bout began at 12:04 o'clock this morning. Jenkins butted Gotch and the latter retaliated with an upper cut and several "mugging tricks. These tactics made the crowd hiss. At the end of the eleventh minute Jenkins applied a strangle hold and brought Gotch down. New Yorks grouped their hits, and therein had all the better of the visitors. In each of the three innings in which the New Yorks had all the better of the visitors. In each of the three innings in which the New Yorks scored they made not less than two lits, and they also scored in every inning in which they did any hitting. In the five innings in which they did not shore they did not make a hit, so it was plainly a case of no waste of material with the wood. It is not often that hitting bears so directly on profits.

Browne, McGann, Bresnahan and Taylor were the lads who did the batting that built up the scoring structure that put the Pittsburgs on the losing side. Taylor has been pitching splendid ball all season, and yesterday he blossomed out as a stugger. Twice did our hero stride boldly to the plate with defiance flashing from his eyes, his trusty bat gripped tightly, and twice did he flay the ball to remote points of the perspective for extra bases. If any one man broke up the game he did. Extra fine work was done on ity balls, with Browne, Howard, Clarke and Wagner the accessories before, with and after the fact. Browne and Howard indeed long flies accurately and pulled them down, and Wagner and Clarke made difficult catches. Clarke's catch off ballen in the eighth inning necessitated a dive forward and a slide on the nose, but the Pirate chief never let go of the ball.

The score was close when the eighth inning arrived, and the Pittsburgs were still very much in the game. Right here the New Yorks put them out of it. Taylor, the terror, slammed a hit past Clarke which yielded three corners. Domin walked. Browne sent a sharp grounder past Leach which brought Taylor home. McGann singled, scoring Browne. Mertes hoisted a dull fly and Carisch made a fine catch near the stand. McGann ran for home on the catch, and Carisch, in an effort to catch him, threw the ball to the right field stand. Not only McGann but Bresnahan came in on the egregious error. The CHICAGO (N. L.), 2: BROOKLYN, 1.

The pitching was better than the hitting at Washington Park yesterday and dominated the strungle. It took ten innings for one side to score a second run, and Chicago was the team that made the two runs. The Brooklyns made only one, and were not able to cross the plate after the second inning. Maloney's muff and Babb' two bagger gave that run to them. Had other Brooklyns batted as well as Babbe the Brooklyns would have won. The Chicagos labored along for six innings without tallying, but in the seventh they tied the score. An atoning two bagger by Maloney, a scratch hit by Chance and an out gave them a run. In the tenth Evers bunted safely and Johnny Kling brought him in with a three bagger.

AMERICAN LEAGUE. Powell vs. Howell, and New Yorks Shut Out the St. Louis Team. The New Yorks shut out the St. Louis team resterday, making an even break of it in the Mound City, not bad in their orippled condition. Powell and Howell again fought it out on the firing line, and Powell, as usual, had the better of the ex-New Yorker. The first double header of the season was played, the Detroits and Washingtons breaking even. The Clevelands had an easy time with the once formidable, Bostons, and Chicago trimmed Philadelphia. The results: New York, 3; St. Louis, 0.

Powell and Howell were again on the firing line, as in the opening game of the series, and Red Jack again turned the trick. At that, Harry pitched a magnificent game, striking out nine men. York scored its first run in the second on an error, a steal, a sacrifice and a wild pitch, Chase coming home. In the sixth inning McAleer sent out Buchanan to warm up, but Harry beyged to be permitted to go the route, which he did. However, as the visitors were three runs to the good then, it was a hopeless undertaking. New York scored a couple of runs in the third. Dougherty opened with a double, was sacrificed to third, and came home on Williams's drive to left. Anderson centered and Chase followed with a sacrifice, placing men on second and third. A wild pitch permitted Jimmy to register.
